Purvaja swinging from vine to vine!

Lindfield East students were fortunate to travel to the Daintree Rainforest in Queensland. All the other children are trudging on the forest floor trying their best not to get mushy mud on the heels of their ebony school shoes but, I am swinging merrily on the leafy vines of the magnificent Daintree Rainforest. All I can see above me is the lofty tree trunks and the collage of greens (the leaves). "Tweet tweet" I can hear the flamboyant birds squealing like young children in a cramped room. There are streaks of light emerging out of the emergent. Creepy critters are crawling up the curly weeds. Hopefully none will come near me or I fret that I shall shiver suddenly. The Daintree is one of the most tranquil places I have ever been to yet it is ever is so humid here where I am.
