

Shylee's Nasty Fall

Here I am on a holiday at the beautiful Daintree Rainforest. I decided I wanted to take a photo near the water so headed with my best friend Lani to take one. I had just seen an extraordinary lorikeet that caught my eye, it flew right past me, and the rainbow colours flashed by me just like a lightning strike. I gave my digital camera to Lani to take the photo. I sat on the rock and waited for her to press the button. She took the photo, I checked to see if I liked the photo, mainly so that if I didn't like it I could take another one because I don't know when I'll visit the Daintree rainforest again. I didn't like so I stood up off the damp rock and stepped another rock out and took a pose. The bright flash hurt my eyes and made me fall into the water. Lani meanly laughed at my nasty fall and then pulled me out of the water. I was soaked, cold and I didn't have any other clothes to wear. Even though it wasn't the most important thing Lani told & showed me the "good" photo of me just before I fell in.

The tropical weather dried my clothes quickly. We went bird watching and saw a rare bird that was as small as my hand, it flew quickly too. We went on a boat on the Daintree River. There was a nice tour guide who explained to us all about the plants and animals. Vines were swinging everywhere and he told us to duck so that we didn't get hit by the thick vines. Lani & I bought some souvenirs from their shop to remember this amazing trip up the coast to Cairns, the Daintree Rainforest.
